

Dear Commissioners:

It's scary to see how even under the "old" rules that how there's a real lack of diversity of opinion in the mainstream media. Changing the rules to allow fewer people to own even more outlets is irresponsible at best.

As it is conservatives like Rupert Murdoch have far too much influence over the information that is received by the American people. And the concept of broadcasters presenting public interest programming in return for the right to lease the airwaves is a concept that has been greatly abused.

Please reconsider the rule changes. And please try to make rules that make broadcasters more responsive and responsible to their communities, rather than less responsible (as with Fox.

Charles Decelles